TRAINING OF HUNTING DOG.

Simple Methods That Will Cure Ant

mal of Gun Shyness. Any dog can be cured of gun sky ness if you take enough trouble and exercise encugh patience, declares Joseph T. Graham, in Outing. The process proceeds on the inference that, since he is alarmed because of memory or fear of disagreeable circumstances, he must learn to associate the gun with the agreeable. It is best to apply the treatment when the dog is on game. In probably four cases out of five, he will quickly learn to disregard the gun, or like it, if you let him hunt up the game and chase it, shooting when he is at a distance and in hot pursuit. Otten gun-shyness disappears the very day he makes his first solid point and becomes deeply interested in the business. In the midst of this new delight, he disregards other matters. Sometimes the fear is too strong, and a regular treatment must be un dertaken. Oftener the owner will have a short shooting season and does not care to take chances on a quick cure. His dog must be ready for business when the season opens So, it is necessary to know the systems which have been successful in dealing with this trouble.

One man put his bird dog to chasing cats. When the cat was treed, he would slap his hands and "sick" the dog into excited attack. At this psychological moment be would fire blanks from a small pistel. Two or three treatments usually sufficed.

The Brute.

"Such an angel of a hat," chirped the vain woman as she twirled before the mirror. "Yellow and white. What does it remind you of, my dear?"

The big man in the embroidered slippers looked up from his paper. "Yellow and white?" he repeated. "Well, now, on the level, it reminds me of a fried egg."
